Abstract:

The landscape of clinical research has shifted away from the traditional, transactional clinical trial, giving way to a new standard, decentralized clinical trials. DCTs are the new era of clinical research, calling for the incorporation of digital health technologies to alleviate burdens placed on the patient, site, and sponsor. But as we begin to incorporate new technologies, how do we continue to maximize the experience of patients, while collecting the necessary data for sites and sponsors? Join us to hear our panel discuss this exciting new era of clinical trials.
